Advocate for educating the student as a whole person and for education in the 21st century

Most recently the Academic Dean and Senior Advisor to Dawson College in downtown Montreal, Quebec's largest College of General and Professional Education, Robert's "dominant interest in public presentations and workshop seminars is to help bring about a major shift in how education is viewed - a shift already taking place here and there, in this, the 21st century. This means encouraging people to rethink what education is thought to be, an immense undertaking and very pertinent in the contemporary world. Such a shift involves: society as-a-whole, educators and teachers, support staff and technicians, policy makers, administrators, families, students themselves and the employment market."
